Unit 3. my future plans. Where to go?

WHERE TO GO?

Many people are already planning trips for spring and summer, which, in General, is logical: you can buy cheap tickets and snatch a good hotel room. But it is more difficult to understand where exactly you want to go if you are already more or less fed up with traveling.

TO ORGANIZE A CAMPAIGN YOU NEED THREE SKILL GROUPS:

- Technical skills — the whole set of tourist skills that will be useful in the planned campaign: route planning, navigation, choosing equipment for the campaign, making food layouts, passing areas with difficult terrain, as well as basic skills of lighting a fire in the rain, and so on;
- Organizational skills: the ability to organize yourself and people on time for a lot of preparatory work;
- Advertising skills — the ability to attract participants to your campaign. Unless you're going alone.

WHERE TO GO?

1. Choose the area of the campaign and determine the level of difficulty
 - you must like it, or why should we?;
 - there are no obvious places where you can die given your skills and experience. If people in photos with hard hats and ice axes, and you do not know how to use it, then you do not need to go to that place yet;
 - the place is financially and legally accessible: it is not worth planning your first route to expensive Patagonia, and the reserve will not be allowed at all;

WHERE TO GO?

2. EQUIPMENT

Equipment can be divided into personal and public. Everyone collects their own personal data, but the list from the Manager will help inexperienced participants a lot. You can pick up public equipment when you know what you are going to do and how many people you have.

WHERE TO GO?

3. MEAL

The Internet has a lot of ready-made layouts, tables, lists, and other things that you can take as a basis. Everything is googled by the query: "food layout". Choose any or do your own — as you prefer. As a result, you should get two lists:

schedule — what we eat and on what day;

list of what you need to buy in total now in the store;

and two digits: ... gram of food per day per person-shows what you will die from:

starvation or from heavy backpacks (less than 500 g-hungry, more than 650-hard);

all of the food in grams — will be useful for future calculations to how many pounds to put in a backpack.

WHERE TO GO?

3. BUDGET

Even if you are doing a non-commercial event, you will have to figure out at the planning stage how much such a "vacation" will cost. Experience, finding out all the questions in advance, will help to avoid surprises. The most expendable items in campaigns are train/plane tickets, equipment, and transfers. Some difficulties in calculating who owes whom and how much will arise when different people pay for different things already in the campaign. I recommend making a kind of Bank-General Fund, which is evenly replenished, spent on public needs, and then the remainder is also divided equally.

Thanks for attention!
